Hello, for this usability test I'm looking to get information on my personal website project for Descent Campaigns. I need to collect data on the usability of the site. This includes accessibility of useful information, clear and visible content, easy navigation, understanding the forms and how they are supposed to be used, as well as easily understanding what will be displayed on each page. These are examples of a website with high usability.

I will be running this usability test, implementing changes, and then running it again to see how the changes and other additions aid the usability.

(Start with home page) On the home page, what do you notice first? What information is available on the home page? Are the instructions clear?

Let's say you are the dungeon master, where would you navigate next? What is your next step to use this website correctly?

(Check out the next page, most likely quest & rules.) What information is available on this page? Are the links on the page visible? Do you know how to access further information from here? Using the step by step guidelines from earlier, where might you go now?

(Check out the next page, most likely character log) What does this form do? How do you use this form? Try and use the form for yourself, inputting the information in the way you would expect. Does the form need anything to be more usable? What does the form do when submitted? How do you do that?

(Direct back to the navigation) What do the other pages do on this website? Is their content formatted well?

Now we're going to talk about general usability. How does the color scheme work for you? Does it detract or add to the overall usability of the website. Is the important information clear enough? Is the spacing and formatting between the content understandable and clean? How does the background image match your idea of the theme of the page?

Thank you very much, and I will rerun this test after using the data and other information to make changes.
